SKINS FORMAT RULES (FSSC)

The Excalibur could not be defeated in battle...

Skins format SCORES the top WAVE of a heat. Each surfer can catch as many waves as possible but once the surfer rides a wave, and they feel they have a high score, the surfer must raise their hands to claim it for it to count. The surfer with the highest count earns $100* and goes on to another heat. Matt Kechele once said "It allows you to be more selective and take your chances, be more aggressive allowing you to take more chances." (As mentioned in many articles in the past years.)

SKINS FORMAT:

Surfers' names are drawn from a hat to determine heat pairings/times (at Pre-Party). If you place anything other than 1st in your heat, you're out. Each heat win (i.e "skins") is worth $100* (JR pro & Women LB $50). Heats are won with the single highest scoring wave, which needs to be visibly claimed by the surfer. When a surfer claims the highest scoring wave of the heat, the surfer must exit the water and sit on the water's edge.

If one of the competitors claims a higher score, the waiting surfer may re-enter the water to win back the high score. However, a surfer can only claim twice in a single heat.
